In small-town Ohio, a sexual assault at a high-school football party led to the sentencing of two offenders. But it was the social-media evidence uncovered by a local crime blogger that revealed the collusion of teen bystanders, teachers, parents and coaches in protecting the assailants. Reconstructing the horrific night, this chilling documentary unpacks the peer pressure, victim blaming and pervasive "boys will be boys" attitudes that contributed to the attack.

A rare London screening of an award-winning documentary that takes a hard look at rape culture
